FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT
JANUARY 1925

Fifth Annual Report

Report of the President

During the past year the stabilization of German currency and the acceptance of the Dawes plan have brought about a fundamental change in general economic conditions. Both of these events combined have given the impression in America that there has been a marked improvement in the general economic life of Germany. In Austria, on the other hand, the year has been characterized by a period of depression.

It is true that with the stabilization of the currency, the individual who has a stated income is placed in a much more favorable position than that in which he found himself in 1923, but on the other hand, the means at the disposal of intellectual workers for carrying on their work have, in many cases, shrunk even more than in the preceding period. The appropriations allotted to scientific and educational institutions by the empire, states and cities are so meagre that efficient work is exceedingly difficult. Particularly teachers in small towns are completely isolated because they are entirely out of contact with the intellectual life of the country, not to speak of the intellectual activities of other countries. An inquiry was instituted by the Society in order to investigate these conditions and it was found that the libraries of universities had discontinued, on account of lack of funds, more than 3,000 subscriptions to German and Austrian journals, while the teachers' libraries in the higher schools in Germany had discontinued more than 8,000 such subscriptions. The drop in foreign journals is even greater.

Since the economic difficulties of Germany and of Austria are based very largely upon lack of capital, the possibility of obtaining funds from private sources at home has dwindled down very much. Nevertheless, the efforts that are being made by Germans for helping in the present difficult conditions deserve fullest acknowledgment. As an instance may be mentioned the help rendered by physicians to those of their colleagues who are in want. According to reports from the Physicians Associations, a sum of $40,000 was required to carry the needy families of physicians through the present winter, and, of this amount, one-half has been supplied by German physicians.

A careful examination of the intellectual life of Germany and Austria proves conclusively that a continuance of our activities is necessary. The changed conditions, however, seem to require some modification of the method of procedure of our society. While during the period of inflation one of the greatest difficulties consisted in lack of opportunities for scientists to carry on their work and to have it published, present conditions emphasize particularly the necessity of keeping the teacher and the intellectual worker in touch with the outer world. For this reason, the Society has negotiated with the Notgemeinschaft deutscher Wissenschaft and with publishers and is gradually substituting for the support of journals the method of placing subscriptions on behalf of schools and institutions where these are needed. In this way, the publications that, on account of the loss of subscriptions, had ceased to be self-supporting, can again maintain themselves and former readers who lost the opportunity to keep in touch with the progress of science are now in a position to follow the work of their colleagues.

It seems particularly important to see to it that the teachers in smaller towns should not be isolated and for this reason an inquiry was instituted among all the higher schools in Germany in regard to the most urgent needs of the schools. The Society has requested similar information from Austria, but so far no reply has been received. In co-operation with the German-American School Association, a special fund was collected for this purpose and the amount of $6,363.72 was distributed. For 1925 the amount of $3,258.12 has been collected so far. A considerable part of these amounts was donated to specific schools and was transmitted in accordance with the wishes of the donors. The amount not assigned to specific schools was distributed in consultation with the school authorities in Germany and, setting aside the amounts paid out in cash, the funds were used for supplying to the school libraries literature in accordance with the wishes expressed by the school authorities as follows:

Report of the Corresponding Secretary

The work of securing new members for the Society has been carried on largely by means of cards sent to the members with the request to furnish names and addresses of people who might be interested in the work of the organization, and from these names new members have been recruited. Members who did not pay dues since 1922 have been dropped from the list.

Just as the Society intends to alter the manner of giving financial support to scientific journals by buying subscriptions for German and Austrian libraries that cannot afford to do so themselves, so it has plans under way to make an active campaign in America for increasing the subscriptions to German journals here. Lists of representative German periodicals are being drawn up by committees of well-known American scholars in the various fields of scientific endeavor and sent out under the auspices of the Society to scholars and libraries with the recommendation that they are indispensable for the proper prosecution of research. This measure will, in many cases materially reduce the need of direct financial support now given to journals by the Society and release funds for other purposes, such as the support of scientific institutions in Germany and Austria. It will also prove of more permanent benefit to the publications themselves, as subscribers usually carry on when once obtained, while a direct subsidy has to be repeated every year. In this way also something positive and constructive will be done to restore again in the United States the interest in and the respect for German scholarship. A beginning, which augurs well, was made last year with the Jahresberichte für germanische Philologie, the Jahresberichte für neuere deutsche Literaturgeschichte and the Jahrbuch der Kleist-Gesellschaft. The Secretary is in correspondence with representatives of the American Library Association, who are in sympathy with this project, and various committees are in process of formation.

F. W. J. HEUSER,
Corresponding Secretary.
